Protecting your Investment – Pneumonia Prevention

Pneumonia is a costly disease in the beef industry. The cost of treatment drugs, time and calf death are obvious, but the decrease in average daily gain and feed efficiency can quickly add to the losses. Find out what you can do to prevent these costly issues.

To Ship or Not to Ship – Cull Cow Decision Making Advice

With fall's arrival comes an additional number of cull beef cows destined for local sales barns across Ontario. When shipping animals to sales barns, producers must abide by rules and regulations set out by CFIA and OMAFRA, but unfortunately some animals arrive at these destinations in a condition that was unfit for transport. This interactive presentation will discuss many of the common conditions that render an animal unfit for transport and give you the tools to make these decisions appropriately on your farm.

Use it – Don't Abuse it! A review of proper Antibiotic use

Health Canada is increasing its surveillance of the use of antibiotics in food animal medicine and is encouraging producers to follow label directions to use these products appropriately. This talk will review how to properly read a product label, and administer a product in the safest way, both for the animal and the food supply.
